Imam said that he and al-Sadr had agreed on the boundaries for the state that would contain the capital Baghdad. In contrast to an Iraqi source who told Ahram Online that the forces from Najaf have been asked to start withdrawing, Moqtada al-Sadr's spokesman, Akram al-Kaabi, said that his fighters were never ordered to retreat. According to al-Sadr, who has been planning a war of religious struggle since he declared his Mahdi Army militia in 2004, the Sunni forces have not shown their weakness by withdrawing from the capital. Instead, they have taken the only safe position available by besieging areas surrounding the capital, "a move which is contrary to the agreed upon plan to liberate Baghdad from the occupier's forces," al-Sadr said. "The Iraqi Government has a duty to protect the holy shrines and they must take control of the areas under the control of the Coalition forces," al-Sadr continued. "The fighters of the alliance of the Mahdi Army will follow this plan and liberate Baghdad from the Iraqi occupier," al-Sadr said. Another al-Sadr source said that the US forces have been instructed to move their outposts to a northern part of Baghdad, away from the city's centre, while the Iraqi army is moving to take control of these outposts. The Iranian sources stated that Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has met with Shia leaders from Iraq and presented a plan to stop the war. When asked by reporters if the meeting was official or unofficial, the sources said that it was "unofficial", adding that the talks were "private". According to the sources, the plan was to put all Shia leaders and parties in Iraq on the same page, which they had failed to achieve during the previous negotiations. The Iranian president was "emphasising the same vision that he had given in his last visit to Iraq". Speaking on Tuesday, Ahmadinejad declared that his visit to Iraq was an "official" visit and that Iran would like to support Iraq. Ahmadinejad said that his visit was a chance to discuss with the Iraqi leadership "the situation and the future", adding that

What's New In IPixSoft SWF To FLV Converter?

iPixSoft SWF to FLV Converter is a simple-to-use software application that can turn Flash video files from SWF to FLV format, as its name says. It features a handy set of intuitive options for all types of users, whether they are experienced with video conversion tools or not. Rapid setup and user-friendly GUI Installing the program requires minimal time and effort. Its interface is made from a regular panel split into three main areas for importing the SWF clip, editing it, and configuring output settings, respectively. It is quite simple to navigate. A SWF video can be imported using the file browser only, since the drag-and-drop function is unsupported. You can preview it in the main frame and check out file information concerning the Flash version, frame count, movie size, and so on. Edit SWF clips and output settings As far as editing options are concerned, it is possible to crop the image (e.g. black borders) and add logos (e.g. for YouTube uploads). Apart from indicating the output profile, you can adjust audio and video parameters when it comes encoder, frame rate, bit rate, size, channel mode and sample rate. Plus, you can disable the audio stream altogether or replace it with another one. Evaluation and conclusion The conversion procedure takes as long as the length of the SWF clip. The video is played during this time, so you cannot carry on with normal activity on the computer. The quality of the output video is pretty good, though. We have not come across any difficulties in our tests, and CPU and

RAM consumption was minimal. All in all, iPixSoft SWF to FLV Converter gets the job done. The present invention relates to a disc storage device for storing information by magnetizing a magnetic material or the like, and particularly to a disc storage device capable of reducing dew condensation on a magnetic material. A floppy disc device (hereafter abbreviated to FDD) is now widely used as a conventional disc storage device of this kind. Such a floppy disc device has a magnetic head that can move in a direction perpendicular to the surface of a floppy disc to write or read information into or from the floppy disc. Thus, it can be used as a magneto-optical disc device that can also be used as a hard disc drive. One of the disadvantages of the floppy disc device is that the magnetic material of the floppy disc is easily exposed to moisture in air. A prior art floppy disc device with a good moisture resistance is disclosed in Japanese Utility Model Laid-Open No. 56-1253. In the prior art floppy disc device, a magnetic head of a magnetic head assembly is made of a resin material, and a magnetic layer of the floppy disc is made of a magnetic material having a large moisture resistance and Until now, there were few options for horror games. The limited control made large rooms, dark hallways, and general room-based scares pretty much impossible. Either you were stuck with tight corridors that snaked around and scared you from behind or you were forced to pick up your
