Steam Fps Counter Big Picture Mode

Best answer:Â No, as long as you don't set it. The best analogy that I can draw for this is a bullet between the two screens. Â . This will happen as a little smudge like pictured here:. I'm not sure how to change it. I don't have a tutorial, but just so you know I'm not lying (I'm not).. Can anyone help? I run the game on steam, and have tried. A: I have managed to disable the Steam FPS counter and its display. All I did was go into the Big Picture Menu (within Steam), launch the game and then go to the Video tab and set the FPS cap to 60. Hope this helps somebody else out there!

A: No, you can't disable the FPS counter. You can however, resize it to the size that you wish, so that it goes away. Show HN: My personal and public Google Calendar - pw Visually, I want it to be unstructured, like a to-do list. On two days, I'm trying to design a highly visual but not touch-only approach. I'll try to finish the design by tomorrow. Google calls it the Google Assistant, and it's one of the most intriguing features of the new Pixel and Pixel XL phones. You'll find it in the Google app and on the lock screen, but it's also available on the phone, via what Google is calling the "Hey Google" hotword. During the launch event, I tried out the feature. The Pixel's stylus was what I used to tap the device's screen to ask the assistant a question. I was able to get things like movie recommendations and concert updates without lifting a finger. And if I didn't immediately respond to the assistant's question, it would continue to ask things until I either acknowledged it, or said the trigger phrase "Hey Google" to stop. This is truly incredible technology that I hope lives up to the hype surrounding the Pixel and Pixel XL phones. I'm most excited about the future of this assistant. I'd love to be able to use this feature on whatever smartwatch
